Dear John:

Many thanks for your letter of the 19th. It indeed was good to see you at the Brookings dinner. Your question was not indiscreet at all but, in fact, an extremely relevant one.

I will definitely keep in mind your suggestion to 'practice a little bit more the politics of hope.'

Best regards to all mutual acquaintances.

Warm regards,

Henry A. Kissinger

Dear Henry:

It was great to see you Thursday night at Brookings. I, and so many others, thought you put on a perfectly superb performance. I felt afterwards that I had perhaps been indiscreet in the question I asked you. It was based so much upon my memories of my own experiences during the days when I tried to cope with a bureaucracy which, even then, had its folkways. I knew enough, I think, to admire the honesty of your reply.

I look forward to the time when you will have the opportunity to write the book that you are hoping to do. (This does not mean that I would be happy to have the Federal Government and the President lose your services.)

Brookings is a knowledgeable group as you know, both its Trustees and its staff. You gave us all a very fine evening. I hope you had some fun afterwards.

It was terribly nice to see Dave and Suzie Young. They are a very nice couple and I am sure it is true that they are giving you most devoted services.

Yours sincerely,

John

P.S.: From time to time I wonder if it would not be possible for the U.S. to practice a little bit of what I call the politics of hope. What I have in mind is that we could, without unduly committing ourselves, outline some of the benefits which could flow from an end of the Vietnam War (I have in mind particularly miracle rice) and the end of the Middle East hostilities. I have less ideas as to what might be done in the Middle East, but it would seem obvious that both areas' economic potential could be very substantial if they would only start working together instead of fighting each other. Couldn't we do more about holding out these carrots than we are?
